STRIKE OF ELEVATOR OPERATORS SPREADS THROUGH NEW YORK

Service in 1000 Buildings is Crippled in Surprise Move

CAUGHT OFF - GUARD

Better Pay and Shorter Working Hours Are Ends Sought For

NEW YORK, Mar. 2—(INS)—It was walk up and like it today for thousands of New Yorkers as the strike of elevator operators and service employes continued to spread through the mid-town and financial areas.

Service in about 1,000 buildings, affecting more than 200,000 tenants was crippled when employes, in a surprise move which caught their employers and city authorities off guard, staged the first of a series of walkouts yesterday.

Unless real estate interests meet demands for better pay and shorter working hours, according to James J. Bambrick, president of the Union, the strike will be extended to all sections of the city.

With all police leaves cancelled and special guards stationed in and about leading office and apartment buildings, a conference was to be held this morning by Mayor La Guardia and other city authorities to discuss the possibility of invoking emergency powers.

The walk-out, long threatened, found thousands of persons compelled to undertake long, arduous climbs to reach their apartments or offices and in many instances when they did reach them they found there was no heat.

The strike was only a few hours old when reports of violence began reaching the ears of the police. More than a dozen arrests had been made last night and there were reports that strikers in the Bronx had invaded buildings and ruined furniture with knives and sticks.

PREPARING NEW TYPE OF SCHOLARSHIP TEST

Will Form 8-Page Comprehensive Questionnaire to Meet Objections of Schoolmen

COMMITTEE IN CHARGE

HARRISBURG, Mar. 2—The State Department of Public Instruction is preparing a new type of State scholarship examination to meet objections of school principals and superintendents to the present tests.

The new examination, when completed, will be an eight-page comprehensive questionnaire for selection of 80 candidates in each county and State Senatorial district to receive the $400 annual scholarships.

In the past several years school principals and superintendents expressed dissatisfaction with the present type test, the chief compláint being that the examination was not sufficiently general to compensate for the wide discrepancies between the courses of study in the various high schools in the State.

This new type test is being prepared by a committee comprising Dr. Clarence E. Ackley, chairman; Dr. Paul L. Cressman, Dr. J. G. Pentz and Dr. Walter B. Jones.

The object of the new test will be to determine the ability of candidates with the major emphasis on the fields of English and history as heretofore, and an incidental exploration of the eight elective subjects in the high schools in the fields of science, mathematics and foreign languages.

Under the new plan ranking will be of very minor importance, the main purpose being to select the most worthy as well as most capabale of the candidates offering themselves for the examination.

The candidates in each county or in each Senatorial district of a county who proves most capable as determined by this new examination will be awarded one of the eighty $400 scholarships, valid in any approved Pennsylvania college.

The scholarships are awarded on the basis of one for each State Senatorial district in counties containing more than one district. In addition one scholarship is awarded in each county forming one entire Senatorial district or part of a district. This makes a total of eighty scholarships awarded in 67 districts.

The Department of Public Instruction announced that Senators who may desire the names of eligible candidates for Senatorial scholarships may apply to the Department for the list of high school seniors who offer themselves as candidates for the annual State scholarship examination.

STOP--LOOK--LISTEN

(Morrisville Herald, February 27, 1936)

Out of the great maze of contradicting policies of the Roosevelt administration oneday, viewed in the calm perspective of history, some things will be found to be beneficial.

But now, amid these Utopian claims, destructive forces are at work. The policy of the State Department, viewed in the light of those of past administrations compared to our present foreign relation and reciprocal trade pacts, may endanger our very national existence.

The peace and security of our nation is imperiled by the destruction of our industries through treaty made competition, throwing the workers out of gainful employment and thus removing the very bulwark of our national defense.

The nations of Europe are planning just the opposite, sanctions have failed because they are making themselves self contained. Mr. Hull is doing a good job for them at no expense to them in disarming his own country.

Europe's sympathies were with Spain in 1898, they ridiculed us then. The United States was not yet in the championship class. But after Teddy Roosevelt sent the White Fleet around the world, remembering Manila Bay and Santiago Harbor, Europe changed its tune.

From McKinley to Wilson, under a policy of protection to industry and labor, the American people became self contained and the products of these protected industries saved Europe in 1914.

In today's dizzy whirl we have lost sight of the stupidity of our State Department and may rudely awaken to find our security gone and the thriving wolves of Europe at our throats.

Congress is now spending on the army and navy the largest sums in our history and at the same time is destroying the industries and protection to the raw materials so essential to the success at arms, are destroying even the food to feed the men who serve the guns.

Depending now for ores, equipment and food upon foreign lands, deliberately destroying our national wealth, where will we be if they turn on us?

Just place an "e" for a "u" in the name of the Secretary of State and that's the mess we'll be in.

Stop—look—listen.

TOO MANY MICE

(By "The Stroller")

A small Hulmeville girl was quite successful at a recent party in that borough, and was among the leaders in the games of "radio."

She later told a relative of her thoughts when she was called upon to select a prize. "I took a dozen eggs," she explained. "There were two white mice there for prizes too, but I thought it was foolish to choose them when we have lots of brown ones at home."

"Captain Blood" and His Pirates Come to Grand

Rafael Sabatini's famous and colorful story of romance and adventure, "Captain Blood," which Cosmopolitan Productions has filmed on a gigantic scale, comes to the Grand Theatre today as a First National release.

This thrilling tale of seventeenth century sea pirates is said to be one of the most elaborate and pretentious productions in screen history.

Settings include great sailing vessels of the period, massive in size and full-batteried, which had to be specially built, complete in every detail; parts of a village in England; most of the old city of Port Royal, in the West Indies, destroyed by earthquake; King James II.'s palace; a governor's mansion; and costumes to suit everyone from King to slave.

Playing the title role of "Captain Blood" is Errol Flynn, a handsome and dashing young Irishman. The feminine lead is played by Olivia de Havilland.

The driver of the second truck was rescued by the deck hand, who leaped into the icy water and held him above the water, until they were pulled to safety.

The victim was Louis Hendricks, 45, of West Philadelphia. His body was recovered several hours after the accident, at the bottom of the river, which is forty feet deep at the point where the truck went down.

Italians Report Victories

Geneva, Mar. 2—With overwhelming Italian victories reported in Ethiopia, the statesmen who gathered here today for a meeting of the League of Nations sanction committee of eighteen, concentrated on the possibility of Germany's sending a troop into the Rhineland.

Predictions were that the committee would try to ban as much of the oil embargo to Italy as possible, inasmuch as the experts reported to the committee the ban would be ineffective without the co-operation of the United States.

Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, of Britain, and Paul Bozour, France's special minister delegate to the League, conferred this morning over the Rhineland situation.

RECEIVE STATE CUP

Seven Are Initiated Into Group To Replace Those Barred By Age Limit

Seven boys were honorably discharged from the American Legion Cadet Corps, Saturday night, as they had reached the age limit and 19 were awarded stars for outstanding service during 1935 at the annual dinner of the American Legion Cadets of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382. The dinner held at the Bristol Recreation Centre was attended by 150 Cadets, American Legion members and guests.

Daniel Halpin who was discharged last year was presented with his shoulder insignia, also. It was announced that Halpin still attends the rehearsals of the corps, so great is his interest.

A handsome trophy won at Wilkes-Barre, last summer, was presented to the Cadets by Harry K. Stinger, Eastern State vice-commander of the American Legion.

Commander Stinger highly complimented the Cadets and told them that in 1929 he organized the Cadets of Howard C. McCall Post, "You fellows have a good organization. You stick together and on behalf of the Department of Pennsylvania I present you with the championship trophy which you won at Wilkes-Barre." There was loud applause as the trophy was handed over to a corps representative. This is the fourth consecutive trophy captured by the Bristol outfit.

It was cadet night in every sense of the word and the members of the organization of which Bristol is so proud, along with the rookies made merry and celebrated in true cadet style. An initiation ceremony for the seven taken into the group to replace those discharged was a feature of the program which was highly pleasing to cadets. Charles Rathke guided the boys in their initiatory work.

Johnston Hetherington was toastmaster of the evening and he told the boys that he considered it a real pleasure to act in that capacity. "You'll all enjoy the program," he said, and he welcomed the rookies who appeared in uniforms inherited from their elders.

The toastmaster announced the guests of the evening including:

Warren P. Snyder, Dr. H. Doyle Webb, Commander and Mrs. Samuel Conklin, Mrs. Dorothy Fechtenburg, Mrs. Frances Strouse, Mrs. I. J. Hetherington, Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Burbank, Joseph A. Scheiber, Jr., Commander and Mrs. J. C. Schmidt, Lieutenant Commander and Musical Director, Charles Brodie; Miss Mary Carty, Lieutenant Commander and Drumming Instructor, Joseph Winslow, Mrs. Marvel Durham, Mrs. John O'Connor, Mrs. Edith Betz, Mrs. Fred Bryner, Mrs. Ethel Ahart and Serrill D. Detlefson.

Edward Linsky, state adjutant, addressing the boys said it was an established policy of the Department to have a representative attend these affairs, each year. He referred to a handsome flag given the Bristol group several years ago and he promised the boys that if they won at Johnstown next year he would make them a presentation that would be worthy of their organization.

The speaker said that the Legion was interested in the junior corps because quite naturally they would take the places of the senior corps in years to come. "How proud your mothers must feel to see you boys in those uniforms and to see you parade through the streets carrying the colors."

John M. Dervin, state finance officer, a prominent attorney in Philadelphia, and a member of the Marine Corps, spoke in a humorous vein but he also highly complimented the boys upon their success in four times capturing the highest honors in the state for junior corps.

"Discipline" was the topic of Mr. Dervin. He impressed the boys with the fact that there must be discipline

INROADS ON INDIVIDUALISM

There is being drafted in Washington as part of a national security program a plan to issue an identification card to each adult resident of the United States, according to Emil R. Fuchs, chairman of the Massachusetts unemployment compensation commission. Mr. Fuchs said he thought no one would be likely to take offense particularly in view of the fact that no fingerprints will be required. The universal identification is said to be necessary and in prospect of being carried out.

Apparently no special cognizance is taken of the factor that not every adult resident will be eligible for federal compensation benefit as the law now stands. Persons who do not relish the idea of giving one round of information about themselves after another, may be gratified at least that they will not be fingerprinted, a process never quite without a certain element of personal mortification or some aspects of silliness.

The foregotten man seemingly has no more chance of maintaining his obscurity than has J. P. Morgan. What with the various tax forms, that have to be made out, the many license blanks that require a comprehensive personal inventory, it has become practically impossible to live anything but a public life. Those who seek an escape from it all by taking a cruise reckon without their customs officials.

That there should continue to be any reason of mistaken identity is one of the paradoxes of our complex modern life.

TURKS GET BUSY

The republic over which Kemal Ataturk presides so efficiently is going in for industry, according to the Turkish publicity agency.

"Effectively," says this organ, "beginning the first month of the year 1934 until the present day, which denote the start in the commencing of the program in question, a good many number of factories have been and are still on the point of being founded."

There are the Combinat at Kaysri, a textile factory at Bakirkoy, a glassware factory at Pasa Bahce, and factories of rose-oils, sulphur and sponges. On paper are a paper factory at Smyrna, an artificial silk plant at Gemlik, and a merino wool mill at Brusa.

"These factories," we are informed, "will, until the year 1937 be set forth to functioning progressively. The sum total of their capital shall be of 15,000,000 pounds, and their value on crude materials shall be of 6,500,000 pounds."

It is good news that these factories are starting to commence in a good many number. It will make work for the Turk, and help bring prosperity to his country.

The Charter for the Bristol Water Company has been obtained. It has yet to be recorded in the Secretary of State's office at Harrisburg, and also at Doylestown. This it is expected will be accomplished next week.

The young men belonging to the New Hope Methodist Church have started a boatman's prayer meeting on the canal.

Mr. P. T. Barnum will open his great Roman Hippodrome on Tuesday of next week at Broad and Norris streets, Philadelphia, entertainments being given every afternoon and evening for two weeks. This exhibition will be one of great novelty and presents extraordinary attractions.

Between four and five o'clock yesterday afternoon, a fire was discovered in one of Joseph Peirce's houses on Lafayette street, occupied by Samuel Cummins. The alarm was given and in a short time the steamer was on the ground; the fire, however, was well under control, and its services were not needed. The fire was caused by the ignition of a lot of rags that had been stuffed in the pipe hole in the second story. The rags dropped to the floor, in which they burnt a hole, the fire creeping along to the weather-boarding before it was discovered. Fifteen cents worth of tin used in stopping the pipe hole would have prevented the fire. The loss is probably less than $100. . . .

Last Saturday morning a railroad accident happened at Cornwells station, which resulted in the death of three persons, seven severely injured, and about a dozen slightly hurt. Early in the morning an excursion train of fifteen cars left Norristown for a trip to New York Bay and up the Hudson. The cars were filled with an excursion party of members of three lodges of American Mechanics, their families and friends, and consisted of about six hundred persons.

Everything had gone right until the train reached Cornwells station. Here the switch was set so as to turn the excursion train to the right on the downward track, when it should have kept straight ahead. The train was running at a speed of about thirty miles an hour, and on the downward track into which it was turning, there stood, at a distance of about 200 yards from the switch, a long train of coal cars. The engineer at once saw the danger and endeavored to stop the train. The whistle was sounded, the air brakes applied, and the engine reversed; but although speed was slackened, it was impossible to stop the impetus of so large a train in so short a distance. The engineer and fireman saved themselves by jumping from the engine just before the train dashed into the coal cars with great violence. Three of the coal cars were demolished, the locomotive of the excursion train was damaged, and the smoking car was driven back and telescoped on the second excursion car. The roof of the smoking car was thrown over the engine and the body of the car was broken almost into fragments. About five feet of the front of the second car was stove in. The crash and the shock caused great consternation among the excursionists, who swarmed off the cars as quickly as possible. From the ruins of the smoking car two men were taken out dead. A third, named Hadley Cox, was taken out fatally injured, and died in a couple of hours afterwards. . . . About two hours after the collision three-fourths of the excursionists continued on to New York, and the remainder, with the injured, returned to Norristown.

The killed were Alexander Schall, of Norristown, aged 40, and Sydney Nagle, of Plymouth, aged 28, besides Hadley Cox, of Norristown, who died soon after the collision. . . .

STATE NEWS

JOHNSTOWN — (INS) — Unexpected difficulties in its convention financing plan may make it necessary for the Johnstown Post of the American Legion to abandon its plan to entertain the State Department of the American Legion in this city in August, it was learned from reliable authority recently.

While merchants of the city, who would garner approximately half a million dollars in business as a result of the convention, have made a strong demand to hold the meeting here, it has not been revealed whether such a drastic action as withdrawing as the convention city will be taken by Johnstown.

Scanning records of previous conventions which reveal that at least $20,000 is necessary to stage the convention and that frequently costs range up to $25,000 and $30,000, the Legionaires admitted they were "up against it." Preparations for the event were at a temporary standstill.

"DAUGHTERS OF VENUS"

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

SYNOPSIS

Madame Hubert, well known beauty expert, makes Juliet Rankin manager of her institute, believing the young girl's pulchritude will prove an asset and offset her own ugliness. Tom O'Hara, former manager of the Hubert institute, objects to Juliet at first but he soon succumbs to her charm. Juliet is greatly attracted to O'Hara because of his resemblance to her dead sweetheart. Mrs. Gottlieb, a patient who had undergone a facial operation to hold her faithless husband's love, is expected to die because of her weak heart. The reputation of the institute is at stake. Hearing Mrs. Gottlieb call for her husband, Juliet summons him. At the sight of him, Mrs. Gottlieb rallies and Madame Hubert is deeply grateful to Juliet. Dr. Von Guerdon, the beauty specialist, expresses his love for Juliet. She is surprised to learn from Gerald McSpadden, the chemist, that Madame Hubert is utterly ignorant of the ingredients in the preparations bearing her name. The chemist mentions O'Hara's popularity with the manicurists, etc. Juliet is irritated. She moves into a luxurious suite at the institute. She is about to retire when she sees O'Hara standing in the doorway. Juliet is furious at his intrusion until he explains that he had had an attack of the fever he contracted years ago in China and Dr. Von Guerdon ordered him to stay at the institute, ignorant of the fact that Juliet was there. O'Hara takes Juliet in his arms and confesses: "I've always backed away from love but I'm going to be mad about you the rest of my life." Juliet is just about to tell O'Hara that he means nothing to her and her kisses were tributes to a dead love, when Von Guerdon appears. He is insanely jealous and threatens to kill Juliet if she bothers with O'Hara.

CHAPTER XI

Even as Juliet struggled in Von Guerdon's stifling embrace, her excitement—she had no fear—was shot through with an astonishing realization that on this self-same night two utterly different men had maddened themselves with love. Not love—desire. In the past there had been long arid stretches in which men merely smiled at her, sent candy and flowers and never so much as tried to squeeze her hand.

But now, through no effort, she had apparently reached some kind of a romantic zenith. Neither Von Guerdon nor O'Hara were ordinary; they were exceptional men who, very likely, could have their pick of hundreds. Sudden irritation swept over Juliet; she put her hands on his chest and pushed hard.

"For heaven's sake—quit snorting down my neck!" she cried. "If you only knew how silly you look you'd stop it. Mauling me around—and breathing on me—and threatening to kill me—and muttering about love—"

She gave him a harder push and broke completely free. The hot flush began to ebb from his face.

"I'm trying to make you understand—"he said tensely, but she cut him short.

"Muck—that's what I call it, ridiculous moronic muck! Twisting my wrists and smearing my face with your filthy kisses. I suppose you expected me to simply go wild with ecstasy when you put on the cave-man act! A fat chance!"

Von Guerdon whitened under this withering blast, his eyes narrowed, but he made no attempt to recapture Juliet.

"It would have been more appropriate," he said incisively, "if you'd thought to make that speech to O'Hara—in time."

Juliet turned her back on Von Guerdon and began to gather up her street clothes, throwing them over her arm. Her face felt hot and prickling. Her bitter flareup at Von Guerdon had been an automatic escapement for her emotions—but actually in her heart she was contemptuously sick of herself. It was difficult to blame men—Von Guerdon and O'Hara specifically—for lack of control.

"I've only myself to blame," she said to herself. "I hate these girls who leave themselves open to this sort of this and then yammer about the man. In the first place, I'd no business getting all worked up with O'Hara. It makes me sick when I think of it! I should have stopped it cold in the beginning. Von Guerdon isn't a fool—he knew what was going on and he, naturally, thought he was next on the list. I must have been looking for trouble myself when I got to stewing around in old memories and mixed O'Hara up with them. And both of them claiming to love me—ugh!"

She straightened up and turned to face Von Guerdon, who was struggling to regain his composure.

"I'll stay here," he said quietly, "until you leave. There's a dressing-room in there."

Juliet looked at him quietly and saw that, for the moment, he would cause no more trouble. His willpower had mastered his excitement and he stood with the military precision of a sentinel.

Sudden irritation swept over Juliet; she put her hands to Von Guerdon's chest and pushed hard.

"Now you're behaving sensibly," Juliet smiled at him, for, actually, she felt a little sorry for his humiliation. "I know this isn't pleasant for you—or me either."

"Exactly!"

It was a bitten-off word and she noticed the whiteness around his temples and cheekbones.

"Oh, for heaven's sake—let's come down to earth!" she cried in a burst of revulsion to the whole situation. "Look here, we're both acting like idiots, aren't we? We've all got good jobs in the Institute and we ought to pull together instead of erupting like volcanoes. You and O'Hara are all right and so am I, whether you believe it or not. How about it—want to be friends?"

She advanced with her hand outstretched. The sleeve of her negligee fell back over the rounded firmness of her arm—a femininity so pronounced that Von Guerdon almost trembled, but there was in Juliet a power other than sex attraction; it was the capability for comradeship and it shone from her dark and fearless eyes, revealed itself like a bright flower on the smile on her soft lips.

The trouble was, of course, that comradeship wasn't exactly what Von Guerdon wanted, but even his baffled resentment had to melt.

He took the smooth warm hand that was offered. The formality of his European upbringing returned. If an American had kissed Juliet's hand it would have seemed ridiculous, but when this thwarted suitor did it, the act was spontaneous and gracious.

"I'm very sorry—for everything," he said in a low tone.

The world, for Juliet, was rapidly becoming normal. "And I'm so sorry for the rough things I said, too," she flashed back. "Everybody loses their head some time, I suppose."

"Emotions are frequently wild tigers," Von Guerdon told her, his voice now quiet. "But I want you please to understand this—I can be impetuous and I can be patient, too. I'm ashamed at my haste and excitement. Still, the fact remains that nothing shall change my feeling about you. Sooner or later you must agree."

"That remains to be seen, though I doubt it," replied Juliet, still smiling.

"You shall see," he assured her confidently.

"But, whatever happens, we won't have any more of these horrible scenes?"

Von Guerdon raised one of his hands; a really beautiful hand, strong and shapely and flexible; a competent hand of a man and a gentleman.

"How little you understand me!" he told her earnestly. "I don't want to lunge and claw like a wild beast for love. That isn't the way it should be. When you come to me it must be as willingly and naturally as—as the rising sun. This I'm telling you—and I'm telling it to myself at the same time. It cannot be otherwise."

He was so terribly serious that a pang of compassion swept through Juliet, but it was only the feeble and pitiful vibration a woman feels for a defeated man. This, however, had happened—Von Guerdon had disclosed to her a rather poetic phase of his nature that had heretofore been concealed behind what seemed to be egotism and cold selfishness. She understood him better than ever at this moment, but no warmth awakened in her.

An atmosphere of formality once more gathered around them. He called a taxicab, sent her back to the hotel for the night, and returned to O'Hara's bedside.

No, it was neither Von Guerdon nor O'Hara that Juliet had to fear. She lay awake long hours wondering at herself. Her smooth body lay perfectly quiet in its chaste bed. Her menace was all inward—a recklessness and passionate force that had the power to tear her to bits. Alone with O'Hara that force had been aroused to greater strength than ever before in her whole life. The next time it might—probably would—overpower her.

"From now on," she told herself, "I cannot take chances."

HOLLYWOOD—The boulevard is buzzing with the story of Clark Gable's valentine. Returning from a party on the night of the 13th, the star sought to drive into his usual stall in the garage of a Beverly Hills hotel. "I'm afraid it is already occupied sir," said the watchman. Thereupon, Gable got out and, to his amazement, discovered an ancient and dilapidated Ford painted white with decorations of large red hearts. Around the body was tied a huge red ribbon.

Gable grabbed the card. It read: "To My Valentine, from—Carole Lombard."

Lina Basquette didn't do so well after her operation and her room at the hospital still carries a "no visitors" sign. She may be there for two weeks yet. Tough luck, too, for she was all set to go into a picture at M. G. M. It started the day she went under the knife.

No one has remarked upon it out here, but Rex Ingram, who plays "De Lawd" in "Green Pastures", bucked the extra game in Hollywood for discouraging years. The six-foot-two-and-a-half-inch Negro actor was one of the savages in "Tarzan of the Apes", when Elmo Lincoln played it for the flickers in 1920. He worked as an extra in the original "Captain Blood", in "Beau Geste", in "The King of Kings" and even as late as "King Kong". He also was on the local stage in "Lulu-Belle" and "Porgy".

And he graduated from a prominent military academy here before he went to Northwestern university to become a four-letter man in athletics and a Phi Beta Kappa in scholarship.

You Asked Me and I'm Telling You! Tommy Girard, Minneapolis: If Peggy Watters intends to have another try at a film career, her friends in Hollywood haven't heard of it. Since the end of the football season, she and Dixie Howell have been in Alabama. I think he is still under contract to the Detroit Tigers, so they may be moving there when the big leaguers start pitching them again.

Walter Abel is a disillusioned man about California houses. He went from a day of work with Ann Harding in "The Witness Chair" to discover 18 inches of water in his basement, and trunks full of valuable linens and costumes, dating back to his first stage appearance, completely ruined. In case Playwright Allen Scott doesn't already know it, the boxes of manuscripts he left in Abel's basement before going to New York, also are a soggy mass.

Some of Hollywood's English colony, lead by Harold Entwistle and Eric Snowden, are organizing a club of players to be known as "The King's Men". Qualification for membership is to have played a command performance before the late King George. The idea is for the club to meet once a year, on the anniversary of the dead ruler's coronation, to pay tribute to his memory.

Interesting, that for the command performance of "Julius Caesar", given on the night of June 27, 1911, at His Majesty's theater, George Arliss, William Faversham, Eric Snowden, Harold Entwistle, Claude King, Edmund Gwenn and Reginald Owen all appeared in the cast. Every one of these players has since been in Hollywood.

Are you a
in your own home?

IT'S A FUNNY THING — but most people don't half see their own homes. We pass by both the fine points and the places that need fixing, without a glance, without a thought.

Yes, we all do this — until some day we decide to look around and really discover the place we live in. . . . Let's start with the living-room. That couch seat—how dingy and dull it looks. And there's a rough place where the cat sharpens his claws. The little rug in the hall is ragged and frayed. (Why, that's a disgrace!) And that table top certainly must be done over. The mantel looks positively bare, since Ted broke that lovely green vase. And all those magazines and papers—what we need is a good-looking stand to hold them.

You see the point. Lots of little things need doing. And it doesn't take lots of money to do them, one at a time. . . . Just make a list of what's needed and then keep watching the advertisements in this newspaper for good buys at low prices. Now's a fine time to find all sorts of good things for the house (February for furniture!), things you've been needing a long time, maybe, things you can have now without spending too much.

Variety Entertainment Occurs; Many Employees Participate

The annual dinner dance given by the staff of the local Metropolitan Life Insurance office, with R. E. Hummel, Langhorne, as manager, was held Saturday at Lincoln Farms, near Morrisville. Wives of the employees and other guests were also in attendance.

Joseph Carroll, acted as master of ceremonies; and Raymond Sheedy, from the Home Office, New York City, assistant general manager, Eastern territory, was toastmaster. Mr. Sheedy addressed the gathering, the crux of his speech being complimentary remarks to the local branch, which proved to be the best district on record for 1935. Mr. Hummel expressed pride in his staff also.

The menu comprised fruit cup, cream of tomato soup, celery, olives, filet of beef, French fried potatoes, peas, cole slaw, rolls, ice cream, cake, coffee, nuts and mints.

The women received corsages of sweet peas, and the men white carnations for boutonnieres. On behalf of the wives of the staff members, Mr. Carroll presented Mrs. Hummell with a basket of flowers.

Preceding the dinner the group sang "America" and the company theme song.

The floor show with Eugene Quinn, Philadelphia, as master of ceremonies, consisted of a three act sketch, a "blues" singer, an acrobatic and a tap dancer. Cadet Corps Holds Annual Dinner; Seven Discharged and that they must first obey before they could hope to be obeyed. He told of visiting penal institutions where those confined therein were there because they had failed to obey.

Jacob C. Schmidt, Jr., commander of the corps, expressed his appreciation for the co-operation on the part of the boys and told them that it was both pride and regret that it was his duty to present the honorable discharges to those retiring. He called each of the seven retiring cadets to the front, one at a time. They approached in military fashion and saluted. Mr. Schmidt as he made the presentations called attention to the outstanding work of each of the recipients. Irvine Hetherington since being a member of the corps won 21 stars, Edward Jeffries, 5, and had been color sergeant for many years; Frank Sabatini, first bugle sergeant won 14 stars; James Mayberry for many years acted as drum sergeant; Alfred Capriotti was very proficient in his drills and has been with the group for a long time; Antone Francescini, a member since 1930, and had five stars to his credit. Dominic Sagolla has 10 stars and became a corporal.

The most outstanding award of the year was given to Leo Riley. It was stated by Commander Schmidt that Riley, a first class trumpeter, never missed a rehearsal and that he walked between three and four miles in order to attend, while others living much closer, found it difficult to be present.

Mr. Schmidt warmly thanked the members of the Booster Association for their very fine support. He told the cadets that these women had raised thousands of dollars for them and that without the aid and support of the boosters, the cadets would have a difficult time surviving.

Gifts from the corps were given to Joseph Winslow, Charles Brodie and Commander Schmidt. The presentations were made by Frank Sabatini.

Charles Brodie, musical director, and who writes all the music used by the corps, expressed his appreciation for the co-operation of the members and told them that "we are going to make it five straight at Johnstown."

BRISTOL HIGH GIRLS LOSE TO MORRISVILLE

The Blue and Gold from up the river again proved their prowess by winning from the Bristol sextet, 17-15, on a neutral court in Trenton Central Junior High No. 3 on Saturday night.

This victory for Morrisville makes them the champion club of the girls' mythical league of Lower Bucks County.

The game was fast, both teams confident of victory, and the intense rivalry only added to the zest of the fray.

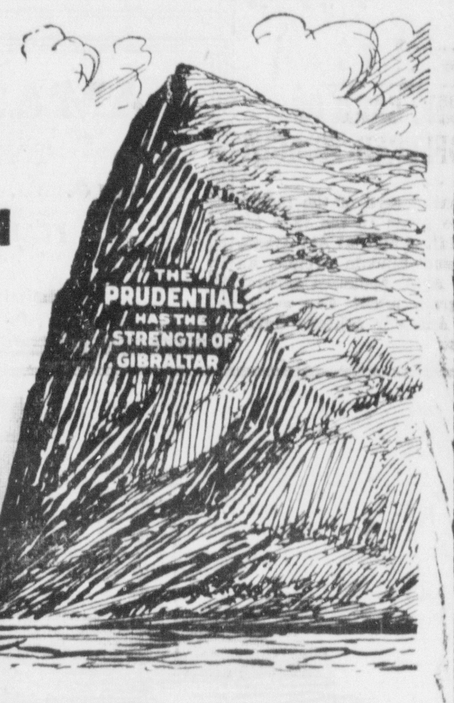

The first play-off showed that the Bristol girls were capable of breaking up Coach Gish's tricky play at the forward end. Between Captain Eleanor Ridge and Eleanor Petrick, who entered the game in the second period as Phyl Wichser made her exit because of fouls, the play was rendered somewhat useless. The guarding was swift and sure, and El. Petrick proved her competency and ability when she kept Nolan from scoring many times. At half-time, Morrisville was holding the lead, 10-5.

The horizon looked brighter for the local team when Faber and Napoli started to tally. Between them they pulled up their Alma Mater's score to 11, while Perry of the opposite club made a gift flip which tied the score. Nolan gained a point and Perry followed it up with two deuces and another foul goal. This ended their scoring for the evening, but their opponents were not yet through. The co-operation of Larzelere and Eckert at center was a constant help to the determined forwards. Faber's two fielders and free shot gave the Bristol girls fresh stimulus as their score mounted to 15, but that was their limit. When the timer's whistle called game, the score was 17-15.

MORRISVILLE RETAINS TITLE AS THE CHAMPION COURT TEAM OF LOWER BUCKS SCHOOL CIRCUIT

By Jack Orr

TRENTON, Mar. 2—Hail to Morrisville's Blue and Gold! The Bulldogs showed their supremacy in the Lower Bucks County League and retained their three-year hold on the title by defeating Bill Dougherty's sixteen-minute ball players in the person of Bristol High, 22-16, in the play-off for the championship of the loop, here, Saturday.

This is the third consecutive year Coach John Hoffman's proteges have copped the gonfalon in the circuit, although this is the first season of the three they have had much opposition. Bristol High led the league as late as last Friday evening but Morrisville defeated Bensalem High to deadlock the final league standings. The resultant play-off Saturday gave the Bull-dogs the right to enter the state P. I. A. A. tournament and they battle Souderton High of the Bux-Mont Conference, Friday evening at Norristown.

The turning point on the ball game, here, came in the third period with the score tied away at 10-10, when Hoffman inserted slim, basketeer-extraordinary—Johnnie Harrison at one of the forward posts. Harrison, playing inspired basketball as do all Blue and Gold courtmen against Bristol broke through and crashed the 10-all tie, sending Morrisville to the fore, never to be headed. He followed Dick Young's basket with another and Bristol's first half ball team went to the air.

The game was nip and tuck all the way and the Bunnies once again led at half time. They held a 10-7 advantage at the intermission.

Dick Young, always a Nemesis to Bristol, started the scoring in the opening minute with a shot from the side. Punk Zefferi converted his foul and Phil Carnvale made it 3-2, Bristol, with a nice shot. Young not to be outdone, however, made one underneath. Morrisville, 4; Bristol, 3. Aiello, rangy Bulldog center, added his foul. Zefferi with a hook shot tied it up at 5-all. Aiello gave the Blue and Gold the first canto advantage at 7-5 when he made his field from scrimmage.

In the second period Bristol played a fine defensive game. They shut out the up-the-river club from both the floor and the foul line. On the other hand Bristol took the lead by virtue of Tom Profy's field goal, Phil Carnvale's two-pointer and Zefferi's foul. The half-time count read 10-7 in favor of the localites.

A shift in the Morrisville line-up was found after the intermission. John Harrison, colored temperamental star, took the floor in place of Hughes. Immediately Harrison made it 10-8 by converting his foul. Young tied it up with his side shot. Harrison, taking the tap, dribbled through the Bristol club to break the tie and give Morrisville lead. Young made it 14-10 in favor of Hoffman's lads with his shot. Harrison again hit the cords for Champions. The period ended with Bristol failing to make a point. Morrisville, 16; Bristol, 10; as the final canto started.

As the final stanza began Punk Zefferi made his foul but Aiello retaliated with a gift throw. Aiello made it 19-11 Morrisville with five minutes left. Zefferi rang the bell for the Bunnies followed by Nick Huffnell's double-decker making it 19-15 and sending the Bristol rooters wild. Three minutes left and the Blue and Gold holding a slim four-point lead. Wilmot converted his foul and the count was 20-15 two minutes to play. The Bunnies had an outside chance to win. Morrisville fans pleading for their five to hold their slim advantage and Bristol rooters screaming for points.

After a Bristol time out, Harrison broke through to make it 22-15 and it was all over. Charlie Hughes converted his foul as the last whistle blew to account for the final figures.

It was Morrisville's twenty-third win in twenty-four starts in the Lower Bucks County league. After running up a streak of nineteen wins the Bulldogs were knocked off by the Cardinal and Gray and since then have copped four wins in the circuit.

There is an outside chance that these two clubs will meet for the 4th time this year, in the Bucks County tournament to be held at Bristol this week. Morrisville holds the advantage in the series, 2 games to one. If Bristol successfully hurdles Doylestown High and Morrisville gets by Fallsington's Orange and Black, the two rivals will meet in the second round of the tourney.

Dick Young accounted for eight of Morrisville's tallies with his four twin-pointers while Johnnie Harrison, who may receive all-County honors, by virtue of his play Saturday, made 3 field goals and a free throw, although playing only one-half.

Punk Zefferi, with a pair of throws from the field and three charity flings, led the Bunnies. Phil Carnvale with two field goals was next. Carnvale was eliminated by the personal foul route.

BEST BOXING CARD OF SEASON OFFERED TONIGHT

The best boxing card of the indoor season will be given to the fans tonight in the Italian Mutual Aid Arena, Wood street and Lincoln avenue, as the St. Ann's A. A. sponsors another ten-bout program under the supervision of the Amateur Athletic Union of this district.

Ten bouts, featuring Bristol boys, will be served to the lovers of the leather-pushing sport. Matchmaker Patsey Moffo has worked on this card for two weeks and up until last night needed two more fighters to complete the card. Moffo is having difficulty in securing an opponent for Vince Delia, Bristol southpaw.

Delia boasts of a hard left which when landed almost continually staggers his opponents. Those Philadelphia boys who are entered in the present tournament taking place are not risking a chance to battle with the Bristol youth. Moffo's only hope remaining for a bout with Delia is Louis Spina, Mason A. C. If Spina consents Delia will battle, otherwise the Bristolian will be without an opponent and cannot be carded.

Lenny Dever will make his indoor debut against Salvatore Manzo, Mason. Manzo has fought here on several occasions and always gave a good exhibition but the Bristol fans are picking the Spruce street youngster to carry away the honors. Dever has participated in bouts in New York since leaving Bristol's outdoor arena.

Harry Davis, colored ace of the borough, will fight Sammy Miller, Chelton A. C. Miller is the 1934 champion of the 170 pound division and is out to stop the winning streak of the Bristol youth. Davis drew a bye in the tournament in Philadelphia and is sure to be placed in the finals.

Sammy Baiocchi is matched with Tony Campagno, Mason A. C.; Dumpty Nocito, unattached, fights Jimmy Gentilo, Mason; William Leighton, Rescue Squad, meets Joie Swartz, Daggert; Jupee Zeffries fights Tony Falcono, Mason; Joie Hayworth, Rescue Squad, meets Bobby Hinchcliffe, East Side; Nick Bellerino, St. Ann's, clashes with Al Hall, East Side.

The first bout will start at 8.15 p. m. sharp.
